Shopping mall sets 6 pm curfew for teenagers – unless they bring their parents

Teenagers have been hanging out in shopping malls with their friends for decades but one mall is putting an end to the tradition – at least after 6 pm. North Park Center in Dallas, which is the largest shopping center in North Texas with more than 235 stores and restaurants, has set a 6 pm curfew after which time any person aged 17 or under must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian. After the curfew any young teens without an adult will be asked to provide ID and if they don't have any, a parent will either need to come and join them or pick them up.

Although young teens and some of their parents may disagree with the curfew, North Park spokesman Mark Annick argues that all the center's shops support the new rules.

'I really do respect that there are parents who may not agree with us completely,' Annick told CBS news.

He went on to say that the rules were not brought in after any particular incidents or complaints but to maintain a family atmosphere for the estimated 26 million visitors who come to the mall each year. The new rules also state that visitors must dress suitably for a family-orientated shopping center. Clothes must adequately cover the body. Visible underwear is not permitted.'

Some parents are backing the curfew, but others say it should be later and some say it is not needed at all.

'If the intent is to stop the hanging around and things like that, I think it's a great idea,' one parent said. Another parent disagreed with the mall's initiative, saying, 'These kids are old enough to have driver's licenses so I don't see why they need to be escorted around the mall.'

However, the curfew does not apply to teens who work at the mall and those who are just there to watch a movie.
